SHERRI - LEIGH DANIEL

Ever so often someone will ask, who are you or even worse you may ask, who am i? This is how i would answer in any case... Yesterday i was a student learning as i went, creating a solid foundation, stargazing as the world rolled out image after image, today i am still the learner, but now, i have the tools to interpret, to design, to create, a story, a moment, a lifetime. For tomorrow i will eagerly await.... a new canvas, a hidden slogan, an idea on the brink of creation.

The earth below his bare feet shifted as he moved across it, gingerly picking his way. Never had he thought this day would come. Behind him lay the dust that once resembled his former homestead. "Ashes to ashes, dust to dust" he recalled these lines in his head over and over. Perhaps he felt that this would ease the pain of moving on. Leaving the harsh truth behind him. No more, there was no more, nothing but dust. Dust and ruins. Snapping out of his trance the night sky filled his senses once again. Earth meets sky, sky meets heaven, heaven encases gods, ancestors, those who reached up before the others. This is what his teachers had said. They had warned of the possibilities such as a time like this. A time when the people of the sky would return to count the people of the sand. To wreak havoc and judgement. But he took solace in this for he knew the prophecy. It was told to him by his father carried from generation to generation, father to son. Soon he knew he would return. The stars twinkled and danced above while the winds swirled around him. Soon he knew he would return.
